Domestic Violence News You Can Use!

Housing Rights

Every day families escape domestic violence and come to our office seeking help in planning their next steps.

Because leaving domestic violence often results in homelessness, our advocates and our clients work hard to find safe and permanent housing.

Many people find it challenging to find housing, but survivors of domestic violence often face additional barriers.

- ♦ Some landlords resist renting to a survivor of domestic violence because she may have left previous housing early, therefore breaking the lease.
- ♦ Additionally, a landlord might resist renting to a survivor of domestic violence because they fear that crimes may occur on their property.

Federal and state law protects survivors of domestic violence from wrongful eviction or from being denied housing because of violence committed against them.

A landlord can not legally terminate a lease, refuse to renew a lease, evict, or refuse to rent to a survivor of domestic violence just because they are or have been a victim. Additionally, survivors of domestic violence have the right to terminate a lease early, in order to seek safe housing elsewhere.

A survivor must meet the following three conditions in order to terminate their lease early:

Sexual Assault Awareness Month is a specific time we target in order to focus on the issues of sexual assault. Every day provides a new opportunity for communities to stop sexual assault. For more information, please contact Human Response Network

MOVIE DESCRIPTIONS

Lewis County:

Hope and Struggle

Filmmaker Anne Fischel will be present at this event. Anne is looking forward to talking with viewers afterward!

Sunday APRIL 26th 3:00pm

This film is a work in progress about a community's attempt to come to terms with a suppressed history of labor struggle.

In 1919, in the town of Centralia, Washington, members of the American Legion attacked the union hall of the Industrial Workers of the World. The attack was widely anticipated in the community, and when it occurred, armed IWW members stood ready to defend the hall. 4 Legionnaires were killed in the battle and in its aftermath, an IWW organizer, Nathan Wesley Everest, was tortured and lynched.

For many years, Centralia community members were actively discouraged from discussing the Centralia massacre, and organizing in the community declined.

The film documents the efforts of Centralia residents to produce a mural, "The Resurrection of Nathan Wesley Everest," (painted by noted muralist Mike Alewitz) to address this suppressed history.

The film recounts the 1919 struggle through the accounts of community residents.

It documents the organizing efforts surrounding the making of the mural as an attempt to come to terms with a traumatic history and consider the significance of that history for the community today.

Finally, the film examines the changing landscape of work and opportunity in the county generally in an effort to pose the question: How can working people today begin to connect with, reinterpret and actively use their history of hope and struggle?

The Resurrection of Nathan Wesley Everest.

I am Angela Shelton - the filmmaker who went Searching for Angela Shelton.

That's me in the picture.

Searching for Angela Shelton opened my eyes to a epidemic of abuse when I interviewed other women with my name and discovered that 70% of them had been survivors of rape, childhood sexual abuse and/or domestic violence.

Then I met an Angela Shelton who tracked sexual predators and lived in the same town as my father who abused me and my step siblings for years. And we arrived to her town on Father's Day!! She lived only a few miles from my father so I confronted my dad on Father's Day morning on his porch before he went to church. It is oddly funny and it is in the movie. I reveal a lot of myself and my life in this movie and I was not expecting to.

Generation M

APRIL 3rd 4:00pm

Cafeteria at Centralia College.

Professor of philosophy Thomas Kieth explores how sexualized images of young women (teenagers in many cases) in pop culture have been rebranded as a form of feminism.

Along the way, Generation M forces us to confront the dangerous real-life consequences of misogyny in all its forms - making a compelling case that when we devalue more than half the population based on gender, we harm boys and men as well as women and girls.
